Mission—The Center for Promoting Health and Health Equality (CPHHE) identifies health disparities and effectively promotes health equality and health improvement in a collaborative community-Creighton partnership in accord with Ignatian values.

The hard work and determination of many people—community members and faculty, plus funding from Nebraska Tobacco LB-692 monies have made CPHHE a reality.

What is it? Through community-campus collaboration, CPHHE will promote health and health equality and foster culturally-sensitive research that addresses health disparities through research, education, and intervention in Omaha and the region.

Who is it? CPHHE is a resource in which both community and the academy have strong roles. The governing board includes an 8-member Community Health Promotion and Research Partnership and an 8-member Creighton Health Disparities Partnership.

Center Director, Henry Lynch MD, director and chairman of the Preventive Medicine Department and pioneer in cancer genetics (the Lynch syndrome).

Co-Executive Director, Sade Kosoko-Lasaki, MD, MSPH, MBA, associate vice president of health sciences, a senior physician and public health professional.

Co-Executive Director, John Stone, MD, PhD, physician-philosopher/bioethicist and adjunct faculty in Center for Health Policy and Ethics, formally at Tuskegee University National Center for Bioethics in Research and Health Care.

Program Supervisor, Reba Donahue
